Save the Polo Grounds for Baseball This Year.

No Action Yet Taken by the Aldermanic Committee.

Several Thousand Petitions Received in the Early Mails.

They Were Sent to Chairman Divver. and Thousands More Will Follow.

Sign the Petitions at Once and You May Help Save the Polo Grounds.

The question, "Polo Grounds for baseball or Polo Grounds for One Hundred and Eleventh street?" has not yet been decided. In spite of rumor and opinion to the contrary the Aldermanic Committee have not yet taken any action in the matter. When the Committee do report, either favora bly or adversely, to the Giants' use of the grounds for another season, it is possible that the report may not be accepted by the entire

the report may not be accepted by the entire Board of Aldermen.

While THE EVENING WORLD cannot but believe that the Committee and the Board will see the justice of the request made by the Giants and their innumerable friends for one more Summer on the grounds, now doubly dear since the winning of two championships, yet it perceives the activity and vigilance of those property-owners who desire the immediate grading of One Hundred and Eleventh street and the banishment of baseball from New York City.

In case the Board decides to permit the grading of the street at once, New York's champion Giants will be relegated to Hoboken or Staten Island for the season.

To avert this calamity to the National game and to insure beyond peradventure the retention of the Polo Grounds for the Giants another season The Evening World's petition was begun. Public opinion is the strongest of all things. And that the public is giving strong voice to its opinion favoring the retention of the Polo Grounds. The Evening World's early mail gives evidence. Over a thousand names were received in the early morning mails, and every mail that comes in is crowded with hundreds of additional petitions.

In the noon mails came another enormous batch of the petitions, nearly every one of which additional petitions.

In the noon mails came another enormous batch of the petitions, nearly every one of which contained five names, and to some of which additional slips of paper crowded with names had be in pasted.

The slips bear the names of people living in every part of the city, but the residents of Harlem are in the majority.

This big array of names, few in number when compared to those which will surely follow, clearly show the drift of bopular sentiment.

But that the evidence may be unmistakable, let the signing go on. The Polo Grounds will not be secure until they are secured. And there is much doubt of that yet. The opposition has a big pull and it is pulling for all it is worth. Everybody who wants the Polo Grounds saved should sign the accompanying petition and send it to THE EVENING WORLD without delay.

To the Board of Aldermen of Neb York City : The undersigned, residents of New York and vicinity and admirers of the National same, he lieving that it is not inconsistent with the major ity of private interests involved, and knowing that it is in accordance with the desire and sentiments of the great majority of the public, that the Polo Grounds shall not be rendered unfit for baseball playing this season by the grading of One Hundred and Eleventh street through the

I next, thereby enabling the Polo Grounds to be used by the New York baseball public and its champion nine this season and affording ample time for the securing of permanent grounds for use in future seasons.

We base this petition purely upon public grounds, in the belief that the interests of the National game in the National metropolis merit the consideration and encouragement of the constituted authorities.

It is also said that Fullgraff has concluded that he will never again testify in a boodie trial to the boodle combine in the 1898 Board of Alderman on another Aldermanic trial.

This intimation has suggested the thought that the recent visit of Assistant District-Attorney Hartmann to Montreal and his consultation with sxiled boodlers there had more of significance than he or Col. Fellows would admit—that, in fact, he was looking for another informer to replace Fullgraff, whose story is becoming rather stale and ineffective.

Comptroller Myers is very anxious to reform the Market Bureau, which is in a very bad state, with no responsible head, Chief Clerk McAdam being in exile and Market Clerk Woltman supposed to be in Bellevue.

he was trying to get away from Mr. Nicoll's subpoens-servers.

The Commissioners of Accounts, who are examining the market books of the Finance Department, have discovered that Clerk Woltman, who has been supposed to be insane in Bellevue Hospital, has not been so badly off but that he could sign the pay-roll and draw his salary regularly.

It is in the knowledge of the Commissioners that Woltman has not been confined in Bellevue, but has been free to come and go as he pleased.

They were were also informed that he had a consultation with Chief Clerk McAdam just prior to that gentleman's seeking seclasion in New Jersey, and it was even rumored to-day that Woltman went to Jersey to see him last that Woltman went to Jersey to see him last evening.

Comptroller Myers explained his failure to suspend Woltman to-day.
He said that he had desired to do so, but was advised that such action on his part might precipitate a return of his mental malady.
Who is back of Charles Philipsen, and who furnished the $7,500 which was deposited with the City Chamber ain to secure his bail on the indictment for perjury has furnished food for much conjecture and comment.
A gentleman who claimed to have some knowledge on the subject says that the money was the proceeds of a certificate of deposit in a Philadelphia bank, but he did not pretend to say who had deposited the money.

In a late conversation in London, he described in these words his impressions of the trip across the Channel from France to England:

"Rough, sir? Rough, did you say? Why, even that monkey of Crane's couldn't hang on to the ship steadily; and every one of the boys was too sick to commit suicide. You know Crane's monkey? He got it from one of the officers of the Essex, at Colombo. Well, that little brute ran the whole business on board the Normandle last night.

"When the packet started and began to rock usinside out, Crane said he'd have to anchor that monkey, and he passed its tail through a ring in the ceiling and tied a knot at the end, so the little thing couldn't fall down and hurt isself. Well, every jolt the ship gave made the little brute swing like a mad pendulum. Well, would you believe it, the steward came in and gave us a tin basin each. Big John Healy, of the All-American team, said he didn't want one, but the steward said there was no extra charge, and and hig John kept the thing as a souvenir. It made us all feel bad to have the basins going around, expecially when we saw the monkey beckoning at the steward to give him one too.

"Then we all lay down on our backs and waited for the inevitable. Little Clarence Du Val, the nigger mascot of the party, was the first to succumb. When the monkey saw the monk on his shoulder like a child. He was sympathetic, too, and shared the monkey's basin, while the other boys used theirs too, in a brotherly way. No one who could have seen us would have doubted our fraternity.

"In all our journeyings and wanderings that English Channel was the only thing which really got the best of us. Friday night's scene aboard the boat was too pitiable for me to describe. There lay those boys who had triumphed over so many valiant adversaries, curled up in most undignifed positions on their bunks.

"The monkey lay on Crane's shoulder limp as a blue rag by the time we got to Newhaven; neither it nor its master had any strength left to speak about, and the rest of us were in pret

STOLE THE CHILD HEIRESS.

ONE MAN HELD, BUT NELLIE AND HER AUNT ARE OVER THE WATER.

Frank McGuinness, a young bartender of 42 Congress street, Brooklyn, arrested on the charge of kidknapping little Heiress Nellie Cresham from her home at Forty-eighth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, was brought before Judge Walsh in the Adams street court-room this morning.

The prisoner is a florid-faced young man and as he stood before the Judge he assumed an air of bravado.

The warrant on which he was arrested also calls for the arrest of Margaret McCann, but as she is almost across the ocean the detectives did not bring her in.

The stolen child is a little girl only three years old. Her mother died in January, and two weeks ago her father, Patrick Cresham who had become morose over his wife's de-cease, committed suicide with a razor.

After Mrs Cresham died Cresham's sister,
Margaret McCann, came over from Ireland and settled down at her brother's home.

He was a salcon-keeper at the corner of Forty-eighth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, and in addition to owning that building he held several other lots on Fortyeighth street, valued in all at $20,000.

It is charged by the relatives of the child's mother that after Crasham died Mrs. Alcordon rifled his pockets and got away with a large roll of bills. She denies this, and claims that the amount she got was only a small one.

small one.

Ellen Mo'Avee, the servant, in her affidavit is swears that last Friday Nellie was taken away by Mrs. McCann, and McGuinness, the bartender. Mrs. McCann told her she was going to take the little one to Ireland.

Lawyer Tighe represented McGuinness in court and put in a plea of not guilty. Judge Waish held the prisoner in $1,400 until next Thursday afternoon.

Waish held the prisoner in $1,000 until next Thursday afternoon.

Attorney Mitchell says that on the day Cresuam died he seut a clerk over to the saloon and had it closed up.

When he called there on the following Friday McGuinness threatened to throw him out of the window. Mrs. McCann wanted to keep the child, and when told that it would be a matter for the courts to decide a he flow.

Lawyer Mitchell says he then brought Toughey, the child's uncle, into court, and bonds on Saturday last, and on Monday they went over to secure the child.

When they got there they were told by the servant that Mrs. McCann had kidnapped the child and had started for Ireland.

Upon investigation he found this to be true, as the woman sailed on the Umbria last 'saturday.

Full perticulars of the kidnapping were ca-bled to the Chief of Police of Queenstown, and late in the afternoon the following was
